Kindness Is Helpful

A little boy called Harry was a naughty boy. No one liked him because he was rude and disobedient but no one knows why. He was only in Primary 4. He was not really feeling sorry for what he had done. He would always run around the class, do tricks on his classmates and his teachers too. He would never listen to his teachers. Even teachers have always punished him, he would always lie! Everybody hated him. Sometimes, students would criticize him. Harry could get mad and fight them! No one has been kind to him. He had no friends. Not even one.

One day, a new student transferred to Harry's school. She sat next to him, since no one was sitting beside him. Harry looked at her with an eyebrow raised. He then spoke, 'Hello. Are you the new student?' She looked at him with a smile. 'Yes, I am. I'm Lindsey.' She said while extending her hand. 'Harry.' he replied as he shook her hand. She then offered him to be her friend. Harry felt a bit shock, he never had friends. Students were criticizing him again. He wanted to fight them again. But Lindsey stopped him and said, 'Hey, you shouldn't listen to them. Plus violence is never the answer.' Harry calmed down and controlled himself. Instead, he apologized to everyone in the school. And students who criticized him also apologized him out of guilty.

Then, Harry became a better person with the help of his best friend, Lindsey.
